2. Story angles (at least 10)

1. The Man Who Wouldn't Take No for an Answer (Champaran)

- Hook: A poor farmer followed Gandhi everywhere until he finally agreed to visit a village.
- Key fact: | Link | "Rajkumar Shukla followed him about, begging him to come and help the suffering villagers in Champaran."

2. The Magistrate's Nervous Moment (Champaran)

- Hook: When the police tried to arrest Gandhi, the crowd outside was so large that the magistrate got scared.
- Key fact: | Link | "A large crowd of peasants was outside the court shouting slogans. The magistrate and the police looked nervous."

3. The 8,000 Stories (Champaran)

- Hook: To prove the British were being unfair, Gandhi sat down and recorded exactly 8,000 complaints from farmers.
- Key fact: | Link | "He cross-examined about 8,000 cultivators and recorded their statements."

4. The Lawyer Who Quit His Job (Kheda)

- Hook: Vallabhbhai Patel had a very successful career as a lawyer, but he gave it all up to fight for farmers.
- Key fact: | Link | "Sjt. Vallabhbhai, in joining the struggle, had to suspend a splendid and growing practice at the bar"

5. How 'Sardar' Got His Name (Bardoli)

- Hook: Vallabhbhai Patel wasn't always called 'Sardar' (Chief)—he had to earn it in the villages of Bardoli.
- Key fact: | Link | "It was the Bardoli Satyagraha that earned Patel the nickname Sardar."

6. The Brave Women of Bardoli (Bardoli)

- Hook: When it came to protesting the taxes, the women of the village were even stronger than the men.
- Key fact: | Link | "Sardar Patel noted that women were better than men in firmness"

7. The Bazaar Flags (Dandi)

- Hook: On the day the Dandi March started, people in cities far away celebrated by putting up flags in their local markets.
- Key fact: | Link | "The 'Dandi March Day' was observed in Nagpur by hoisting the national flag. A procession passed through the main bazaars"

8. The Speech to the Government Workers (Dandi)

- Hook: On his way to the sea, Gandhi stopped in a town and told Indian government workers to quit their jobs.
- Key fact: | Link | "He wished all government servants to give up their jobs. A government job gave them the power to tyrannize over others."

9. The Sacred Road to Navsari (Dandi)

- Hook: Villagers set up free drinking water stations all along the dusty road so the marchers wouldn't get thirsty.
- Key fact: | Link | "You have made the road from Navsari to Dandi famous throughout the world by arranging for free drinking water at frequent intervals"

10. 8:30 AM at the Beach (Dandi) - Flagship Story

- Hook: With one small lump of muddy salt picked up from a pit, millions of people realized they could break an unfair law.
- Key fact: | Link | "Gandhi and his volunteers broke the salt laws at 8-30 A.M. on 6 April 1930 by taking a lump of natural salt which was deposited in a small pit."
- Why this is the flagship story: The exact time and the specific detail of picking the salt from a "small pit" make for a perfect visual opening to a story about India's most famous act of protest. It's a small action that a 10-year-old can easily picture.

3. People and places connected

- Rajkumar Shukla: A persistent farmer from Bihar who brought Gandhi to Champaran.
- Vallabhbhai Patel: The leader of the Bardoli movement who earned the title "Sardar" and gave up his law practice for Kheda.
- Aslali: A small village where Gandhi halted during the Dandi march to explain the salt tax to poor villagers.
- Navsari to Dandi: The stretch of road where locals set up free drinking water for the marchers.
- Nagpur: A city that held processions in its bazaars on the day the Dandi march started.

4. Disputes, legends and doubts

- Who named Sardar Patel? UNSURE. We know that "It was the Bardoli Satyagraha that earned Patel the nickname Sardar" | Link, but the exact person who first shouted or officially gave him the title during the 1928 protests is not specified in the searched archives. Some legends say it was the women of Bardoli, while others say it was Gandhi, but the source simply says the event itself earned him the nickname.

5. Pictures
