Udham Singh - Research dossier

Evidence notes only | For stories about India's freedom struggle, ages 10+ | Compiled 22 October 2026 | Sources and picture records are clickable.

1. Basic facts

Name, family, education, work and organisations

Identity: Born Sher Singh, later known as Udham Singh.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “His real name was Sher Singh.”

One documented alternate name: Frank Brazil.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “Frank Brazil”

Another name used in Britain: Mohamed Singh Azad.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “Mohamed Singh Azad”

Born at Sunam, Punjab. Birth date is DISPUTED (26 Dec 1899 versus 23 Aug 1901 in colonial records).

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “born on 26 December 1899 in Sunam”

Alternative birth date as cited from colonial records.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “Colonial records list his date of birth as 23 August 1901.”

Father: Tehal/Tahal Singh; mother: Narain Kaur (spelling varies).

Source [7]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “to Tehal Singh and Narain Kaur”

Older brother: known as Mukta Singh and later Sadhu Singh; death reported in 1917.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “In 1917, Udham Singh’s brother also died”

Both parents died when he was young; the two brothers entered Central Khalsa Orphanage in 1907.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “admitted to the Central Khalsa Orphanage at Amritsar on 24 October 1907.”

Education: an NBT account reports a matriculation exam in 1918.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “after passing the matriculation examination in 1918.”

Work abroad: factory tool-maker in Detroit, later carpenter and film extra in Britain.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “working in Detroit for the Ford Motor Company as a tool-maker”

Cinema extra work: in 1937 he appeared in crowd scenes at Denham Studios.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “During 1937 he was an extra in crowd scenes”

Ghadar Party: had contacts in California; South Asian Britain describes him as a member.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “member of the Ghadar Party”

Killed: executed by hanging at Pentonville Prison in London. Most sources give 31 July 1940; one NBT page wrongly or differently gives 12 June. See Section 4.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “executed on 31 July at Pentonville Prison”

Ten major life events, in date order

1907 - Admitted to the Central Khalsa Orphanage in Amritsar.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “24 October 1907”

1917 - Death of his older brother, according to the NBT account.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “In 1917, Udham Singh’s brother also died”

1919 - Jallianwala Bagh massacre took place on 13 April; whether he was there is UNSURE.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “on 13 April 1919”

Early 1920s - Worked and travelled outside India, including the United States; connected with Ghadar activists.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “he established contacts with the Ghadar Party”

30 August 1927 - Arrested in Amritsar for unlawful arms possession and banned literature.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “On 30 August 1927 he was arrested in Amritsar under the Arms Act”

23 October 1931 - Released from prison.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “He was released from the jail on 23 October 1931.”

1934 - Arrived in Britain and later lived and worked in London.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “He managed to acquire a passport and made his way to London in 1934.”

13 March 1940 - Shot Michael O'Dwyer at Caxton Hall in London.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “on the 13th March (1940)”

4-5 June 1940 - Tried at the Old Bailey and sentenced to death.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “On 5 June 1940, in Court 3 at the Old Bailey”

31 July 1940 - Executed at Pentonville; NBT contains a conflicting 12 June date.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “executed on 31 July at Pentonville Prison”

2. Story angles (18 research leads, not stories)

1. The Boy with Two Names

Hook: Why did Sher Singh become Udham Singh?

The orphanage changed his name during Sikh initiation.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “Sher Singh was baptised as Udham Singh”

The brothers arrived together at the orphanage.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “admitted to the Central Khalsa Orphanage at Amritsar”

2. A Brother at the Orphanage

Hook: Who was the older brother he lost?

The NBT biography says the brother received the name Sadhu Singh.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “Mukta Singh became Sadhu Singh.”

His brother died in 1917, according to NBT.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “In 1917, Udham Singh’s brother also died”

3. The Date on a Birth Record

Hook: Why do books and colonial files give different birthdays?

A commonly used date is 26 December 1899.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “born on 26 December 1899”

The UCLA historian cites a different colonial-record date.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “23 August 1901”

Editorial caution: Flag the birth-date conflict in any story timeline.

4. The Missing Witness

Hook: Was Udham Singh inside Jallianwala Bagh when soldiers fired?

NBT portrays him at the gathering.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “a young lad Udham Singh, along with his friend.”

Historian Kim Wagner says supporting evidence is limited.

Source [9]: Scroll.in (historian's book extract) | Exact quote: “although there is little evidence for this.”

Editorial caution: Do not dramatise a first-person eyewitness scene as established fact.

5. The World Beyond Punjab

Hook: Where did work take him before he returned in 1927?

A university account records tool-making work in Detroit.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “working in Detroit for the Ford Motor Company as a tool-maker”

It also places him among the Ghadar activists in California.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “While in California, he established contacts with the Ghadar Party”

6. The Banned Paper

Hook: Why did police seize a revolutionary newspaper with weapons?

The 1927 arrest involved copies of Ghadr-i-Gunj.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “copies of the prohibited paper, Gadar-I-Goonj”

A later newspaper report says copies were recovered.

Source [7]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “The copies of “prohibited” Ghadar Party paper”

7. Fingerprints from 1927

Hook: What can an old fingerprint card tell us?

The Tribune reported the survival of a 1927 fingerprint card.

Source [7]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “These were taken on October 10, 1927.”

It also reports a later April 1940 note on the same record.

Source [7]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “the prints bear a noting of April 1, 1940”

8. A Passport Under Watch

Hook: How could a police-monitored traveller cross borders?

British officers discussed a passport application in 1936.

Source [16]: The Times of India | Exact quote: “the endorsement should not be refused”

University research places his London arrival in 1934.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “made his way to London in 1934.”

9. An Extra in a Film

Hook: What was he doing near a London film studio?

He worked as an extra in crowd scenes at Denham.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “an extra in crowd scenes”

In 1938 he was employed as a carpenter at an RAF station.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “he worked as a carpenter at the RAF station”

10. A Name Written on an Arm

Hook: Why did he insist that the court use his chosen name?

A barrister reports that Mohamed Singh Azad was tattooed on his arm.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “a name tattooed on his forearm”

A letter demanded that officials not change that name.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “do not try to change my name”

11. The Letter with a Clothes List

Hook: What did the prisoner ask to be brought after arrest?

A 16 March letter requested items of Indian clothing.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “requesting Indian shoes, trousers, a shirt and a turban.”

12. The Small Diary

Hook: Did a hollow book hide the gun, or is that a legend?

A museum curator told The Tribune that the diary was too small.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “It’s far too small to hide a gun.”

A newspaper account says the revolver came from a jacket pocket.

Source [11]: The Indian Express | Exact quote: “pulled out a revolver from his jacket pocket”

Editorial caution: The popular cut-out-book scene should not be narrated as settled history.

13. Two Officers with Similar Names

Hook: Was his target the man who gave the firing order?

Historian Vinay Lal distinguishes Michael O'Dwyer from Reginald Dyer.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “O’Dwyer, though he did not order the massacre”

A historian quoted by The Tribune points to Dyer's earlier death.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “Dyer had died in 1927”

14. The Trial Notebook

Hook: What did a detective write in pencil about his arrest?

A defence barrister reviewed detective Sidney Jones's notebook.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “DS Sidney Jones’ notebook”

Entries lacked clock times.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “The entries were written in pencil with no time recordings.”

15. The Papers in the Courtroom

Hook: Why did a condemned prisoner begin reading prepared pages?

A contemporary 1940 newspaper reports him producing papers in court.

Source [12]: Grey River Argus, digitised by National Library of New Zealand / Papers Past | Exact quote: “produced a sheaf of papers at the Old Bailey”

The trial barrister says records were held back from the press.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “ordered the press not to report the statement”

16. The Prison Letters and Books

Hook: Who received his requests for books in Brixton Prison?

Seven letters are reported preserved at Guru Nanak Dev University.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “seven handwritten letters”

A letter requested Waris Shah's Heer.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “he requests Waris Shah’s Heer”

17. Prison Number 1010

Hook: Why did the same four-digit number appear on each letter?

The Tribune identifies his prison number and signature.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “his prison number 1010”

He signed letters using a short form of his assumed name.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “his initials signed as M Azad”

18. A Journey Home in 1974

Hook: What happened to his remains after burial in London?

His remains were brought back to India in 1974, according to Indian Express.

Source [15]: The Indian Express | Exact quote: “In 1974, Singh’s remains were exhumed in the UK and repatriated to India.”

NBT gives the conflicting year 1975.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “in 1975, however, the Government of India”

Editorial caution: A second clear source conflict; see Section 4.

Flagship research recommendation

Angle 10 - A Name Written on an Arm. The 1940 name appears in a legal writer's description of trial and police papers and in Singh's own reported letter. It can anchor a short account about identity, language, and a small surviving object without inventing scenes at Jallianwala Bagh. Source support: Counsel (source 5), exact quote: “a name tattooed on his forearm”.

3. People and places connected

Tehal (Tahal) Singh - father; worked as a railway crossing watchman.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “working as a watchman on a railway crossing”

Narain Kaur - mother; named in report of a surviving fingerprint file.

Source [7]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “Tehal Singh and Narain Kaur”

Mukta / Sadhu Singh - older brother who lived in the orphanage.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “Mukta Singh became Sadhu Singh.”

Bhagat Singh - named in a prison letter as a friend and reference point.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “he mentions Bhagat Singh”

Shiv Singh Jouhal - friend who kept the prison letters until donation.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “his friend and close aide in London”

Waris Shah - writer of the Heer text requested from prison.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “Waris Shah’s Heer”

Michael O'Dwyer - former lieutenant governor of Punjab, killed at Caxton Hall.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “murder of Sir Michael O’Dwyer”

Brigadier-General Reginald Dyer - commander responsible for the firing at Jallianwala Bagh, not the man shot in London.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “Brigadier General Reginald Dyer, the perpetrator”

V. K. Krishna Menon - member of Udham Singh's defence team.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “Krishna Menon was part of his defence team.”

Justice Atkinson - judge in the murder trial.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “Mr Justice Atkinson sentenced Udham Singh to death”

Detective Sergeant Sidney Jones - investigator whose notebook appears in trial material.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “DS Sidney Jones’ notebook”

Ghadar Party - organisation connected to Singh's overseas activism.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “member of the Ghadar Party”

East India Association and Royal Central Asian Society - convened the Caxton Hall meeting.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “East India Association in conjunction with a society”

Sunam - town in Punjab where he was born.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “born on 26 December 1899 in Sunam”

Central Khalsa Orphanage, Amritsar - institution that cared for the brothers.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “Central Khalsa Orphanage at Amritsar”

Jallianwala Bagh, Amritsar - 1919 massacre linked to later accounts of his motives.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “at Jallianwala Bagh”

Caxton Hall, London - site of the 13 March 1940 shooting.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “at Caxton Hall”

Brixton Prison - where prison correspondence and hunger strike were recorded.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “during his time of trial at the Brixton prison”

Old Bailey - court where his trial took place.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “in Court 3 at the Old Bailey”

Pentonville Prison - prison in London where he was executed.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “executed on 31 July at Pentonville Prison”

Guru Nanak Dev University - later custodian of prison correspondence.

Source [6]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “housed at Bhai Gurdas Library at Guru Nanak Dev University.”

4. Disputes, legends and doubts

A. Date of birth - UNSURE

Widely used date: 26 December 1899.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “born on 26 December 1899”

Alternative in colonial records, cited by UCLA historian: 23 August 1901.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “Colonial records list his date of birth as 23 August 1901.”

Finding: Preserve both. Do not say the age at any episode is exact.

B. Present at Jallianwala Bagh or abroad? - UNSURE

National Book Trust repeats the eyewitness account.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “Amongst the thousands of people present during the massacre”

Historian Wagner describes the supporting evidence as weak.

Source [9]: Scroll.in (historian's book extract) | Exact quote: “although there is little evidence for this.”

The Times of India quotes a 1940 government inquiry that could not confirm he was there.

Source [13]: The Times of India | Exact quote: “do not confirm his statement”

Finding: The story of serving water, being shot in the arm, and swearing revenge on the spot is a LATER POPULAR ACCOUNT, not verified eyewitness testimony.

C. Which relative, if any, died in 1919? - UNSURE

A university project refers to a brother and sister killed in the massacre.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “his brother and sister were killed there”

NBT says his older brother died in 1917.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “In 1917, Udham Singh’s brother also died”

A 1940 home department inquiry found no confirmation of a family death at Amritsar.

Source [13]: The Times of India | Exact quote: “We have no knowledge of any brother or other relative being in Amritsar”

Finding: Do not invent a dead sister, a childhood scene, or a named relative as fact.

D. The famous hollowed-out book - LEGEND / UNSURE

NBT describes a gun hidden in a large book.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “a revolver hidden inside a big book.”

Crime Museum curator disputes that claim.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “It’s far too small to hide a gun.”

Indian Express describes the gun being taken from a jacket pocket.

Source [11]: The Indian Express | Exact quote: “from his jacket pocket”

Finding: A pocket diary has been confused with a gun-sized hollow book; do not use the hollow-book scene without new primary evidence.

E. Mistaken identity: Dyer versus O'Dwyer - DISPUTED THEORY

UCLA separates the lieutenant governor from the officer who ordered the firing.

Source [3]: UCLA / MANAS | Exact quote: “O’Dwyer, though he did not order the massacre”

The Tribune describes a book arguing Singh confused the names.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “a case of mistaken identity”

The Tribune cites a historian rejecting a mix-up because Dyer died in 1927.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “Dyer had died in 1927”

Finding: The shot man was Michael O'Dwyer. Dyer gave the firing order in Amritsar; they were different people.

F. How many days was the 1940 hunger strike? - UNSURE

University project lists a 36-day hunger strike.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “a thirty-six-day hunger strike”

Contemporary newspaper reports 42 days.

Source [12]: Grey River Argus, digitised by National Library of New Zealand / Papers Past | Exact quote: “on hungerstrike for 42 days”

Court researcher describes forced feeding from May 1 without a total duration.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “since May 1st has had to be fed artificially.”

Finding: Do not write an exact duration without reconciling prison medical records.

G. The execution date - CONFLICT IN A PUBLISHED BOOK

University project gives 31 July 1940.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “executed on 31 July at Pentonville Prison”

National Book Trust contains 12 June 1940.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “on 12 June 1940 in the Pentonville Prison”

Finding: These are the two published versions. The 31 July date is independently supported by multiple contemporary and institutional sources; NBT's 12 June passage conflicts with its surrounding chronology.

H. Year the remains returned - DISPUTED IN SOURCES

Indian Express gives repatriation in 1974.

Source [15]: The Indian Express | Exact quote: “In 1974, Singh’s remains were exhumed”

NBT gives 1975.

Source [1]: National Book Trust, India | Exact quote: “in 1975, however, the Government of India”

Finding: Show both years and keep 1974 claims separate from the 1975 passage.

I. Was he Michael O'Dwyer's personal driver? - LEGEND

The Tribune reports a 1940 newspaper attribution to his chauffeur.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “O’Dwyer was murdered by his chauffeur”

The Tribune quotes Roger Perkins rejecting that job relationship.

Source [8]: The Tribune | Exact quote: “what he certainly did not do was to go anywhere near Sir O’Dwyer”

Finding: The later historian's denial rests partly on statements attributed to O'Dwyer's family; classify as later investigation, not proof of personal acquaintance.

J. What was his final courtroom statement? - DOCUMENT LIMITATION

A barrister reports that the official transcript omits the final words.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “The final words of Singh are missed off the official court transcript”

DPP summary notes include a repeated word.

Source [5]: Counsel, The Magazine of the Bar of England and Wales | Exact quote: “Inquilab”

Finding: Later quotations of a long closing speech should identify the specific transcript, reporter, or archive record.

K. Marriage or descendants - UNSURE, NOT INCLUDED AS FACT

The research project's biographical entry lists other names and work but no verified spouse.

Source [2]: South Asian Britain: Connecting Histories (University of Bristol research project) | Exact quote: “## Other names”

Finding: Popular accounts assert a marriage abroad, but no opened, reliable primary document was confirmed in this dossier. Omit spouse and children claims.

5. Pictures

Only file pages individually opened on Wikimedia Commons are included. Date is the date stated in the description, not upload date. Licence wording follows each page; verify requirements again before publication.
